Inaugural Ball

Ever since George Washington took office in 1789, there’s been a presidential inaugural ball. Give your students a taste of what the president experiences with an inaugural ball of their own—complete with dinner and dancing. They’ll join other EF Explore America travelers from around the country to celebrate the presidential inauguration in their nation’s capital and continue a tradition that’s almost as old as our country itself.

Inauguration Day

Marking the commencement of a new four-year term of a president of the United States, Inauguration Day was originally on March 4, four months after Election Day. Today, it’s January 20. During Inauguration Day, your students will be part of all the Inauguration events—such as the inaugural address, parade and ball.

Inauguration: By the numbers

14
The most inaugural balls any president has attended.

$12,500
Price for scalped inaugural ball tickets during the 2013 Presidential Inauguration.

$4
Ticket prices to attend James Madison’s inaugural ball.

8,495
Number of words in William Henry Harrison’s inauguration speech—the longest of any president.

135
Number of words in George Washington’s second inauguration speech—the shortest of any president.

1.8 MILLION PEOPLE
Largest attendance of any inauguration in history for President Obama’s 2009 inauguration.

“Words cannot describe the wonderful learning experience my students had on the Inauguration trip. It captured what it means to be an American.”
